SHINGTON (AP) — Budget ators on Thursday night fin- all but final details of a two- $75 billion deficit reduction but their efforts failed to avert 's Gramm-Rudman spending h divisions in Republican ranks g doubt over final enactment of reement, White House Chief of Howard H. Baker said Presi- Reagan would order the $23 bil- Gramm-Rudman cuts even if partisan bargainers came up last-minute pact.

en the White House and con- onal negotiators broke for the they said they had reached the where details needed to be checked with Reagan and congressional leaders.

"I don't know how much more you can massage these figures," said House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill. "They're pretty well set."

But Michel was among the many House and Senate Republicans expressing opposition to the emerging plan, so much so that congressional enactment was endangered — even if bargainers complete a deal. Given that opposition, the White House joined congressional Republicans in opposing a delay in the Gramm-Rudman cuts.

Baker, leaving a session with congressional budget writers, repeatedly said "No" to reporters' questions about conditions under which Reagan would accept a delay, as proposed by some lawmakers.

Asked if he was employing a strategy to keep the pressure on the talks, he said, "My thought is I do what the president says, and he says he won't go along with postponing" the cuts.

Once the cuts took effect, they could be changed or undone with subsequent legislation.

The Gramm-Rudman law requires $23 billion in deficit reduction in fiscal 1988, which began Oct. 1. By the end of the day Friday, Reagan must order such a cut in federal spending, half from domestic programs and half from the military.

Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., one of the negotiators, said the deficit-reduction plan attracted support from only nine of 35 Senate Republicans who atended a closed caucus. The others said they would rather see the Gramm-Rudman cuts take effect. Many House Republicans also were opposed to the plan.

Some Senate Republicans support limiting Social Security and other federal cost-of-living increases, an action anathema to their House colleagues.

Democrats said they wouldn't pass a plan without GOP support.

"I'm not going to ask Democrats to jump off a cliff while Republicans wave at us," said House Budget Committee Chairman William H. Gray III, D-Pa.

e're very pleased about the state participation," said Don Cameron, executive director of the NEA. "It's a good solid way to get information," he said. According to Cameron, 35,000 educators have participated in open hearings in all 50 states to discuss candidate endorsement.

Detailing Utah's participation process, Campbell said, last summer at a leadership workshop, the endorsement process was explained to 350 local education leaders. Open hearings were then held at the UEA convention in October to discuss the candidates. Utah educators also received the results of an NEA questionnaire, stating the candidate's stand on education-related issues, as well as videotaped interviews with the candidates, Campbell said.

According to Cameron, all candidates for president were invited by the NEA to fill out a questionnaire, as well as to be videotaped in an interview with NEA President Mary Futrell. Each state received the results of the questionnaire as well as a videotape, he said.

To determine whom local educators were supporting, 40 hearings were held throughout the state from mid-October through Nov. 10, Campbell said. Further information-gathering included a random survey of 450 UEA members. The results were sent to the NEA for tabulation of states' input, he said.

"In Utah, we don't see a really strong leader emerging," Campbell said. "The teachers feel it's too early to endorse someone in December."

He said that Vice President George Bush and Bob Dole were most often positively mentioned on the Republican ticket, with Paul Simon, Michael Dukakis and Richard Gephardt on the Democratic ticket.

The Christmas season traditionally begins Nov. 27, one of the largest shopping days of the year, and retailers are anticipating a large turnout.

"That is when a lot of people start their Christmas shopping," said Erma Bines, an employee of the auditing department of a local retail store.

"From the indications in October and November, it's going to be a positive Christmas," said Dave Erikson, store director of a local department store.

The sales seem to be starting early, said Erikson. "This season the consumer is going to come out and participate."

"It's going to be a fabulous Christmas.

"The management is dancing on its toes," said Bines.

"If a store has a bad year, Christmas sales will usually help it recover," said Dane. In the case of small stores, Christmas sales can determine the success or failure for the year, he said.

Erikson said he did not think prices would be raised this season.

"The stores will be very competitive." he said.

This Christmas competition and promotions will make shopping nice for the consumer, said Erikson.

The average family will spend $400 to $500 on gifts, said Dane.

"The opening of Geneva Steel is definitely a plus in the retailer's favor.

"It has put the payroll back in circulation," said Dane.

For the last three years Christmas has been bleak because of the Geneva shutdown, said Bines.

Even though local consumers are spending more because of the area's improved economy, they still want to save money.

Dane said to get shopping done early so there is a better selection. "Don't procrastinate and wait until last day of the year."

Bines advises to "shop the bargains. There are a lot of price breaks."

Predicted popular gifts this season include sweaters, jackets, hats and gloves, said Erikson.

Soviet delegation arrives in Tooele

TOOELE ARMY DEPOT (AP) — Russian Ambassador Yuri Nazarkin Thursday called for a May deadline to reach an international chemical weapons treaty as a six-member Soviet delegation began its tour of Tooele Army Depot's chemical weapons disposal plant.

Differences remain

Nazarkin said while differences remain between the United States and U.S.S.R. on verification and other procedures, he thought an agreement on reducing and eventually banning chemical arsenals could be obtained by late May, when the third session of the Conference on Disarmament is scheduled in Geneva.

However, U.S. Ambassador Max Friedersdorf quickly ruled out that the U.S. would accept an arbitrary deadline.

He said the U.S. did not want the pressure of public opinion or congressional deliberations to come into play before the details of an agreement are worked out.

"The Soviets are always wanting to set artificial deadlines. We don't deal with them on trust; we deal with them on making a treaty so tightly bound and ironclad that they can't cheat," Friedersdorf said.

Earlier Thursday, Nazarkin praised the Soviet tour of the depot's Chemical Agent Munitions Disposal System prototype plant as a big step toward eventually banning chemical arsenals.

The Soviets, who arrived at this remote desert installation 50 miles southwest of Salt Lake City about 10 a.m., were escorted without ceremony to the depot's South Area for a briefing.

Soviet about-face

The Soviet Union refused to attend a United Nations workshop at the facility in 1983, but in a recent diplomatic about-face accepted an invitation from the State Department's Arms Control and Disarmament Agency. An American group inspected Soviet chemical-weapons demolition programs last month.

Nazarkin characterized the visit to Tooele as an indication that negotiations between his country, the United States and 14 other countries to ban chemical weapons are nearing agreement.

"We're here to visit as a confidence building measure. We believe this exchange of visits facilitates the atmosphere at the conference on chemical weapons, which is now in the final stages, we believe," Nazarkin said at a breakfast meeting with U.S. officials.

Questions remain

However, Friedersdorf took exception with Nazarkin's statement.

"I think that's overly optimistic. There has been progress this year, but there remains an awful lot of detail before a treaty can be concluded," he said.

He said the Soviet diplomat, who also is the U.S.S.R.'s chief chemical weapons negotiator, had been saying a treaty to ban chemical weaponry is near since mid-summer in an apparent effort to influence congressional action on U.S. production of binary weapons.

The United States expects the first of its new binary chemical weapons — a 155mm artillery projectile — to roll off the assembly line on Dec. 17, a fact that Friedersdorf believes convinced the Soviets to negotiate seriously on the international ban.

"They're afraid of losing their monopoly on chemical weapons. They can bully Western Europe with this huge monopoly stockpile," he said.

Major obstacles still to be resolved include details of on-site verification and the Soviets' unwillingness to say what types and amounts of chemical weapons they possess and where they are produced and stored.

New RA proposals considered

ASBYU Student Council deliberates over latest suggestions

By DEBORAH HANCOCK
Universe Staff Writer

The proposal for having off-campus resident assistants could possibly be replaced by one of two new proposals to the Student Council which include a ward support group or a called and sustained apartment counselor from each ward.

In an ASBYU Student Council meeting Wednesday where these two new ideas were discussed, Kathryn Pond, a Student Council chairman, said, "We want to emphasize family home evening groups, home teachers and the overall support groups within the ward as a means of improving morality. We'll emphasize programs that are already in (The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints)."

The ward support group is the most highly favored proposal among the students interviewed by the council, according to Aldo Van Muijen, a council member. "Overall the consensus is that the students don't want RAs, and they think the family home evening idea is least offensive and intruding.

"You're going to have problems. You're never going to solve the problem," said Van Muijen. "But they (students) think the best medium between harshness and complete, blatant violation of the rules would be the first proposition — the family home evening proposition."

The purpose of the support group is to stop the problem before it happens, according to Michael Jones, a council member. The group would have to be dedicated to serving the students or the program would not be effective, he said.

Last winter semester the administration proposed that all university-approved apartments, without on-site managers, approve having resident assistants act as agents on the premises, said Pond. The RA would seek to maintain BYU standards, according to the Off-campus Supervision Program pamphlet.

But the majority of students have viewed the RA issue negatively, according to Van Muijen. "When they're (students) going on-campus, they are making the decision to have the RA around. But while they're off-campus, they should have the decision to be free from the RA."

Some students agree with the RA issues to a degree, he said. "There are a couple of people on my floor who believe since the Church is paying for at least two-thirds of our education, they have the best of interest in our success, and therefore they should have two-thirds say on how we lead our lives.

"Thereby they're perfectly justified putting in RAs to insure that the standards are maintained," said Van Muijen. "To a greater extent, I have to agree with that myself."

The second proposal is to have a priesthood-holder in each ward called to the position of apartment counselor, according to Pond.

"It could be a member of the bishopric or an adviser," he said.

Shultz to meet Shevardnaze next week

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz will hold an unexpected meeting next week in Geneva with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze to try to smooth the way for a successful superpower summit, Reagan administration and diplomatic sources said Thursday.

With the summit less than three weeks away, the two sides have not completed a treaty to ban intermediate-range nuclear missiles. President Reagan had hoped to making signing of the accord the centerpiece of his talks with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

But while one U.S. official said Shultz would focus on the unsettled treaty, another said he wanted to concentrate on regional issues with Shevardnadze.

Shultz is expected to see the Soviet official in Geneva on Monday and return before Thanksgiving. In the meantime, U.S. and Soviet negotiators will work through the weekend in the Swiss city, trying to finish the treaty.

The unsettled issues involve ways to verify compliance with a ban on U.S. and Soviet missiles in the range of 315 to 3,125 miles.

A State Department official, speaking on condition of anonymity, told The Associated Press this week that if the treaty is not ready by the end of the month the summit might be postponed.

However, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Wednesday the summit would go on as scheduled and the treaty signed by Reagan and Gorbachev.

Report says aides hindered investigation

WASHINGTON (AP) — National security aides John Poindexter and Oliver North interfered with seven criminal investigations when the probes threatened to expose the Reagan administration's private Contra resupply operation, the congressional Iran-Contra committees say.

Meanwhile, Attorney General Edwin Meese III, the target of strong criticism in the panel's 690-page report, described the study on Thursday as "a great job of Monday morning quarterbacking."

"There wasn't anything particularly new," Meese said of the report, which said he failed to keep records and neglected to seal North's office during a weekend inquiry last November. The probe uncovered a diversion of funds from a secret sale of arms to Iran to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

North continued to shred documents throughout the weekend inquiry.

The report, released Wednesday, also concluded that Meese probably approved the use of private funds for a failed 1985-86 ransom operation for U.S. hostages in Lebanon.

Cockpit inexperience worries officials

WASHINGTON (AP — The major airlines have been easing their hiring requirements because of the need for thousands of new pilots, and some aviation safety officials worry about the decline in cockpit experience.

Pilot inexperience has been raised as a possible factor in last Sunday's crash in Denver of a Continental Airlines DC-9 after it was disclosed that both the captain and copilot had only recently begun flying that type of jetliner.

Spokesmen for the airline disputed suggestions that the two pilots' flying background was unusual, calling it "the norm in the industry." They emphasized that both pilots met Federal Aviation Administration certification requirements.

But aviation experts said the overall experience level of pilots at rapidly expanding airlines, even some of the industry's largest carriers, has fallen off in recent years.

"This is one of the areas of concern that we have today. There's been such rapid expansion that (pilots) have come up (the senior system) rapidly and the total level of experience can drop," said Homer Mouden, vice president of the Flight Safety Foundation.

Fire raged in London's subway station

LONDON (AP) — The government on Thursday announced a public inquiry into a sudden and quick-spreading fire that raged through London's largest subway station, killing 30 people and injuring about 80 others.

Survivors of Wednesday evening's blaze told harrowing stories of people on fire and of being carried on an escalator into the flames.

People collapsed from smoke and many pounded helplessly on windows of passing trains in search of an escape from Britain's worst subway fire.

An assistant fire chief, Joe Kennedy, said fighting the flames was like "going down a roaring chimney."

Fire officials said they could not explain how a small fire could spread so quickly. Investigators descended into the cavernous, fire-ravaged ticketing plaza of the multi-tiered King's Cross Station to search for clues.

Fire chiefs said they were certain the fire broke out on one of the escalators, not beneath it as was previously thought, but added they had no idea what caused it.

Pidcock to receive mental evaluation

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A Salt Lake Community College instructor accused of attempting to hire a hit man to kill his wife has been sent to the Utah State Hospital in Provo for a competency evaluation, a lawyer said.

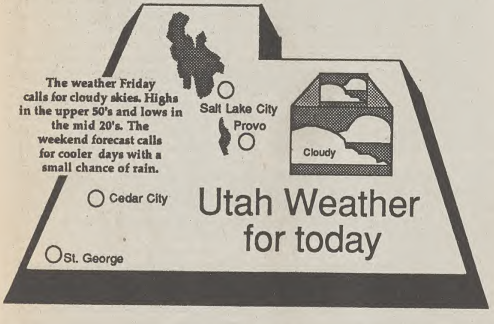
Defense attorney Nancy Bergeson said Thursday that her client, Gerald Pidcock, has shown signs of emotional and psychological problems and will undergo tests to see if he is able to assist in his own defense.

A preliminary hearing scheduled for Wednesday was postponed indefinitely.

Pidcock, 53, was charged Oct. 15 with two counts of attempted criminal homicide for allegedly scheming to hire a Vietnam veteran to kill his wife and her exercise partner.

He was arrested after police said a man made a $500 down payment on a $25,000 contract to kill Patricia M. Pidcock, her exercise partner and possibly a third person as a diversion.

"There is some question whether Mr. Pidcock is in tune with reality so that he understands the nature of the charges against him and if he is effectively able to assist in his defense," Bergeson said.



The weather Friday calls for cloudy skies. Highs in the upper 50's and lows in the mid 20's. The weekend forecast calls for cooler days with a small chance of rain.

Council hopeful

Springville officials work out problems

By NICKI KOCHERHANS
Universe Staff Writer

Springville's city council is looking forward to a future free from the problems of the past two years, according to council members.

The present council has had many internal struggles, according to council member Marvin "Pete" Roundy, assistant principal at Springville High School.

According to Roundy, the council did not have a good working relationship with Mayor Kenneth Creer, who was elected two years ago. "We've never gotten together to work out problems," Roundy said.

Because of these problems, none of the present council members ran for reelection. "The best thing for the city was for all of us not to run," Roundy said.

Creer said, with four new council members coming in, the council and mayor should be able to get along better.

"Although the work will be the same, different decisions may be reached that were not reached before," he said.

New council members include Loren J. Phillips, John Hafen, Matt C. Packard and Wilford W. Clyde.

Clyde said the new councilmen are willing to work together. "I think we've got some good people who have won," Clyde said. "I don't think there is anyone on the council that I can't work with."

However, the new council has already faced its first problem — the election itself. According to City Recorder Richard Manning, Springville has an ordinance saying a person can ask for a recount if the vote is within one vote per district. Springville has 18 districts and Phillips lost by 13 votes.

Phillips requested a recount and, when it was all over, Phillips had won by 45 votes, according to Manning.

Creer said this was apparently due to the fact that some ballots counted as eligible in the first count were judged as ineligible in the second count because they were not properly filled out.

Doctor alleged 'exorcist'

ST. GEORGE (AP) — A St. George chiropractor who allegedly used his practice to sideline in exorcisms has been placed on year-long probation by state licensing officials.

The Utah Division of Occupational and Professional Licensing ordered Dr. Jan Marion Graf to stop his "unauthorized practice of chiropractic." He was also ordered to meet every three months with the chiropractic licensing board to review the nature and scope of his practice.

The DOPL filed a petition in May, alleging that Graf was using a technique called "kinesiology" to diagnose evil spirits in his patients.

According to the order released Wednesday, Graf has treated numerous patients since 1979 with "chiropractic psychology."

After reviewing the case history, Graf purportedly would evaluate the "energy fields" of the patient's body and "locate and draw off negative energy and eliminate stress."

If he determined evil spirits were causing the patient's problem, Graf would refer the patient to "religious authorities or command the patient to instruct the evil presense to leave."

The chiropractic licensing board determined that Graf's treatment "does not comport with the recognized standards of ethics of the chiropractic profession." The board found Graf's alleged failure to render an accurate diagnosis in patients treated for evil spirits could constitute a danger to a patient's well-being.

hat the public probably saw was mittent black plumes of smoke. These plumes are only temporary and have a purpose, he said.

Burnell Cordner, director of the bureau on air quality for the Environmental Protection Agency, said the state allows for a start-up period of excess emissions from the new ovens. He said the reason for this is the need to seal the cracks in the brick of the oven.

Cordner said after an oven has been idle for a period of time, the brick becomes somewhat weakened. The excess emissions come as a result of the carbon which is produced during the burning of coal and is used to seal and strengthen the ovens, he said.

"We don't measure the exact additional particulate level which enters the air, so we don't know the levels emitted from the two ovens. We simply measure the outside ambient air quality," said Cordner.

The state places emission limits on each unit, according to Cordner. Cordner said there is an allowance, however, which states that during the start-up period, the unit may exceed this limit.

"There are five or six pollutants that have specific health-based standards," said Cordner. He said the two most prevalent in Utah County are particulate matter and carbon monoxide.

Bollow said Geneva has also been running an additional blast furnace. These furnaces make molten iron which goes into the open ovens. He said the reason for the use of the additional oven is the increased cost of scrap metal.

Bollow said by running the additional blast furnace, Geneva can keep its costs down and remain competitive within the industry. "Those workers who were hired to run this blast furnace have been told we will eventually go back to only one furnace and that the work is temporary," he said.

Bollow said Geneva currently has approximately 1,500 workers and is continually bringing back union workers who formally worked for USX and hiring new employees.

Catholic leader stresses teaching basics to youth

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reteaching youth the importance of marriage and family is the key to reducing teenage pregnancy, not handing out contraceptives to children, says Roman Catholic Bishop William K. Weigand of Salt Lake City.

His comments were made after the National Conference of Catholic Bishops passed a resolution Wednesday that calls on states to ban public-school health clinics from distributing contraceptives or from counseling girls on abortion.

Instead, the nation "must go back to the basics in schools, especially in family, and in the church communities to help reteach our young people the importance of marriage and family life, and abstinence from sexual expression ... prior to marriage."

On Living On Campus

I chose to live on campus for the convenience and economy. But it's the people who keep me here. I've gotten to know girls in my hall and in other halls, and everyone is always friendly and excited to get involved in the wide variety of activities. Everyone needs the "on-campus" experience because there is something here for everyone.

Man held in connection with child's fatal beating

KEARNS, Utah (AP) — A 41-year-old man was being held for investigation following the death of a 2-year-old Kearns boy.

The boy, Andrew Stout, was pronounced dead at Primary Children's Medical Center Hospital and an autopsy was being performed.

Salt Lake County Sheriff's Lt. Bruce Thayne said Wednesday, the boy was diagnosed as being brain dead when he was admitted to the hospital Tuesday night.

Doctors initially indicated the boy's injuries resulted from being beaten in the head or from being violently shaken, Thayne said.

A man who has been staying at the boy's home recently was booked into the Salt Lake County jail Tuesday for investigation of child abuse and on a prior warrant for forgery. Charges were pending in the child's death.

Sheriff's officers responded to the boy's home on reports he had fallen 18 inches to the floor from a bed.

The boy was unconscious when officers and emergency personnel arrived.

There were several bruises on his head, his face was swollen and his right eye was swollen shut.

We'll treat you to a sweet deal.

Artwork reproductions condemned

By CAROL ANN BEETON
Universe Staff Writer

Things aren't always as they seem, especially when it comes to art reproduction.

Art professor Wayne Kimball condemned current advertising methods in which photographic reproductions of artwork are made to sound like they are originals.

According to Kimball, who spoke during the Flea Market of Ideas lecture Wednesday, advertisers highlight features like "fine rag paper," "limited available quantities" and the names of renowned artists to lead the public to believe the artwork is an original product.

"They simply are reproductions of paintings or drawings, rather than being genuine prints, where the artist forms the image directly on the printing element," he said.

Such reproductions, according to Kimball, are less desirable because features of the original medium are lost or less evident. An oil painting's vibrancy, or the stark effect of a woodcut, is never quite the same, he said.

Kimball reviewed the four different processes of printmaking, with examples to illustrate concepts.

Relief-making, he described, is a process in which an image or character is raised above a support, then coated with a substance such as ink, which will leave an image when pressed against paper or canvas. He mentioned typewriters, dot-matrix printers and rubber stamps as examples of how the process works.

Turrentine Jackson, famous western historian, spoke Wednesday about his research for Wells Fargo Bank and other personal experiences.

Historian relates tales from past experiences

By JACK L. HARDY
Universe Staff Writer

According to a recent lecturer, individuals involved in public history often appear in court as expert witnesses.

Turrentine Jackson, a renowned western historian, spoke Wednesday evening, relating many stories about life as a public historian.

Jackson told the story of his dealings with Wells Fargo Bank. The chief executive officer wanted evidence that Wells Fargo owned or operated a stagecoach at some point in history.

After a long search which finally ended in New York City, he found the evidence so the company could legally claim the stagecoach as a part of company history.

Jackson said, "I had the talent and the methodology to do things correctly. I felt I had the social obligation to do things well."

Jackson's work in public history has earned him employment from the National Park Service, the federal government and many private organizations.

Jackson said students in the field of public history learn important skills that will prepare them for many fields, "especially law."

Many times Jackson has been called to be an expert witness in litigation cases. He said he presents the good and bad evidence.

According to Jackson, the evidence is never slanted because, sooner or later, someone will come along and discover something you didn't and you lose credibility.

"The only negative thing I could say about public history is that you don't have control over your own schedule," said Jackson. He said many times you have to change your plans because of interruptions from clients and other situations.

Jackson's speech was sponsored by the Center for Family and Community History.

Naivete a problem for MBA graduates

By CLAIN UDY
Universe Staff Writer

There is a problem of naivete among BYU business graduates entering the real world of business, according to the director of BYU's MBA Career Development Center.

Royanne Boyer, who spoke as part of the Graduate Business Fair lecture series this week, said according to the National Advisory Council, the biggest problem with BYU MBA graduates is the ill-founded idea that they will be watched over and led to the top by companies they work for.

Although companies have a systematic wage and promotion advancement program, Boyer said graduates must take the initiative and get things done by themselves.

She also said students should not think there will not be a problem with ethics once they have graduated and are in the business world.

Students would be surprised, she said, at the things honest people will do when their job is on the line and the pressures of a competitive business world come crashing down.

Boyer advised students that upon graduating with a master's of business administration, it would not be wise to wait for companies to come groping for help with running their business.

In a survey by Johnson Graduate School of Management, 49 percent of corporate leaders think MBA graduates (nationally) are aggressive, overambitious and overpaid, according to Boyer.

However, recruiters are uniquely impressed with the adaptability and willingness to learn of BYU MBA graduates, she said.

Lasers replace artist's easel

By KEVIN CHASE
Universe Staff Writer

The ELWC Little Theater was transformed into a scene that resembled "Buck Rogers in the 25th Century" during Thursday's Flea Market of Ideas lecture.

Kinetic light artist Peter L. Myer spoke to students about the new art form which utilizes computer art, lasers and electro-luminescent gasses. These media are a far cry from the palette and oil paints which once served as an artist's primary tools.

"Modern technology has opened another door for artists," said Myer. "An artist needs to be part of the changing world around him, using the most recent technology in his work."

According to Myer, the history of art parallels the history of technology.

Each advance in technology is reflected by the change of medium used by the artists of the era.

Myer said light has been used by artists since the days when cavemen painted on the walls of caves. "However," he said, "only recently have we begun to truly understand this medium that we have always felt so comfortable with."

Frank Magelby described kinetic light art as "a combination of engineering and art." He attributed Myer's success in light art to his exposure to both fields.

"Light is a very rapid media," said Myer. "The same job that would take ages and ages of animation can be completed in weeks or even days on a computer."

He said he thinks one day art galleries will be using continuous computer programs instead of the usual displays of art.

ast sponsored for homeless

ATHY CROPPER
verse Staff Writer

is Sunday, the Utah County Food and Shelter ition is sponsoring a fast for the homeless people in Valley.

lthough Thanksgiving is a time of plenty for most of or others it is a time of desperate need. (It is) a time lp out those people who are less fortunate than us," Adah-Marie Miller, director of the Food and Shelter ition.

aReta C. Evans, chairman of the fast, said, "The d and Shelter Coalition has been a referral source for homeless. For the past year they have been prepar- warm meals at local churches such as the Provo munity Congregational Church, the Episcopal rch and the Catholic Church. Unfortunately, these ileges will no longer be available after the first of the th. We need to raise funds so we can rent a place to y out our warm meal program for the homeless."

eilton Fletcher, director of the Utah Valley Commu- Action Agency, disagrees with the plan. "This is the I've heard about it. Although we usually work di- ly with the Food and Shelter Coalition, they haven't rmed us of this fast," he said.

"We have various programs set up for those who are down on luck. We work with them until they are settled. A temporary shelter, like the Food and Shelter Coalition is suggesting, is not necessary," he added.

Evans disagrees. "I realize the Community Action Agency doesn't feel there is a need for a 'Soup Kitchen' (warm meal program), but we disagree. In the past it has been very successful. The Community Action Agency may be helping the homeless to get jobs, but right now we have no place to prepare warm meals. That is our concern. If everyone in the community was to donate $1 to this cause, we would have enough money to continue the warm meal program," said Evans.

Rob Daines, ASBYU student body president, said, "Obviously, there are enough efforts of this sort around that there is a need."

"Psalms 41:1 reads, 'Blessed is he that considereth the poor: the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble.' I hope the community chooses to follow the Lord's advice by helping out the poor and needy this Sunday in our county fast," said Evans.

Miller has asked that the money normally spent for Sunday's meals be sent to: FAST Deseret Federal Savings and Loan, 95 North University Avenue, Provo, UT 84601.

nree graduate student plays to debut controverversial play by Henrik , a new translation of a German by Buchner and Shakespeare's elfth Night" will be performed on ous this weekend.

l three dramas have been pro- d by graduate students in the ter and Film Department.

Voyzeck" is a German historical na based on a 1810 incident in- ng a peasant soldier. Georg ner wrote the play in 1837 but it n't produced until 1913 when it eired in Vienna, Austria.

e BYU production marks the iere of a new translation of the nan script by Thomas F. Rogers, a BYU languages professor.

"It's the best translation I've read," said Christian Heppinstall, graduate student and director of Roger's script.

Heppinstall said "Woyzeck" is a tragedy which "explores the spiritual degradation of the common man." He also said audiences should be warned that the drama deals with mature subject matter.

Heppinstall's production will be performed in a cabaret-type atmosphere in the Margett's Arena Theatre today and Nov. 21 at 7 and 9 p.m.

Ibsen's "Ghosts" will also have its first full-scale production on campus this weekend.

Genia Shipman, director of "Ghosts," said her production is also controversial. "It deals very frankly with some important, controversial issues."

Shipman's drama will be performed in the Nelke Experimental Theater, HFAC, today and Nov. 21 at 7:30 p.m. and a matinee performance at 4 p.m. Nov. 21.

Chamber orchestra debuts faculty works

By TERRY L. JONES
Universe Staff Writer

The word "akeldama" is Hebrew for "field of blood," but it's also the name of a premiere work by a BYU faculty composer.

"It was a piece I worked on when I was a first-year doctoral student at the University of Illinois," said Michael Hicks, whose work will be performed by BYU's Chamber Orchestra Nov. 21.

"The piece is built from the sounds of the word 'akeldama' and also the mood of the words 'field of blood,' " said Hicks. "The piece is actually dedicated to Anwar Sadat who was assasinated at the time I was working on the piece."

Another influence on "Akeldama" was "materials I had used in an earlier cantata," said Hicks. "This is sort of the dark side of the cantata."

The orchestra is premiering the piece because they like to perform works by BYU faculty a couple of times each year, said Clyn Barrus, director of the orchestra.

Two other major works will be performed, including Beethoven's Second Symphony, one of the "great masterpieces of classical literature," said Barrus.

Tchaikovsky's Roccoco Variations for Cello and Orchestra, featuring Julie Zumsteg on cello, will also be presented.

The orchestra has 45 players selected from the Philharmonic, said Barrus. They are planning a week-long Arizona tour in February, as well as a tour to the Northwestern United States in April and May.

The Saturday concert is free and will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the Madsen Recital Hall, HFAC.

Pianist takes stage at BYU

The BYU Performing Arts Series continues tonight as master pianist Shura Cherkassky is featured in a solo piano recital at 7:30 p.m. in the de Jong Concert Hall, HFAC.

The diverse program will include "Prelude, Chorale et Fugue" by Frank, "Carnaval" by Schumann, "Variations on a theme of Corelli" by Rachmaninoff and "Kaleidoskop" by Hofmann.

Cherkassky has been acclaimed one of the greatest pianists in the grand Romantic tradition. An immigrant from the Ukraine, he has received worldwide recognition for his piano works.

His debut tour began in 1923 and included appearances with Walter Damrosch and the New York Symphony. He also had a command performance at The White House for President Warren G. Harding.

Now he regularly performs at the music festivals of Europe and has collaborated with some of today's most distinguished conductors.

In addition to North America and Europe, he has toured throughout the Far East, including China, Hong Kong, Singapore, Thailand and Japan.

He also has toured Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and his native Russia.

Cherkassky will also perform Chopin's "Nocturne in F Minor," and "Barcarolle in F-Sharp Major" and Liszt's "Paraphrase on Faust by Gounod."

Spikers take Santa Barbara in three

Lane Peterson spikes the ball through the hands of a couple UCSB players. BYU won the match in three straight sets.

LEANNE HOWARD
Universe Sports Writer

BYU "dug" its way past the No. 4 ranked University California—Santa Barbara as they took the Gaucho's in three straight sets, 15-11, 15-5, 15-10.

"We played good tonight, real good," Cougar coach Tom Peterson said. "We dug better on defense then we ever have. It was a good defensive effort by all the guys tonight."

Middle blocker, Lane Peterson, raked up 10 digs for a career high, and hit .429 to lead the Cougars both offensively and defensively.

"We had some nice rallies, real crowd pleasers. They're a scrappy team, but in the end, we just put it all together and played better defense than we usually do. It was nice," Coach Peterson said.

The Cougars jumped out to a 7-3 lead in the first game thanks to the blocking and hitting of the Cougars Rob Vail and Lane Peterson.

The Gaucho's brought it back to within three at 10-7, but momentum turned back to BYU as Cougar Sam Atoa served four straight points to put the score at 14-7.

A Cougar block by Kent Smith and Lane Peterson put the game away.

"They're better than what they showed tonight. They hit a lot of balls out that they usually wouldn't. They also made a lot of errors that they normally wouldn't. I'd like to think that for the most part it was because we didn't let them get on a roll. That's when they're tough," Coach Peterson said.

Strong serving by BYU's Lane Peterson (four straight), Vail (two straight) and Pat Lindahl (three straight) put the Cougars up 13-3 in game No. 2. They were backed up with strong play at the net by Lane Peterson and the hard hitting of Atoa.

"After some big mistakes with serving and passing in the first game, we really came together and played well overall. It was a good effort by everyone," Coach Peterson said.

BYU allowed UCSB only two more points as a Lindahl serve and a Vail kill brought the game to an end.

BYU carried that momentum into game three as they jumped out to an early 9-0 lead.

The Gaucho's narrowed the gap to 10-5 with strong hitting by UCSB's David Leath and Jose Gandara.

A BYU side-out sent Brent Berry to the serving line to serve three straight points, including an ace, before the Gaucho's regained control of the ball.

UCSB pushed the score to 14-10 behind the strong serving of Gandara, Jon Wallace and Chris Pennel. A kill by Cougar Bill Brown and a missed block by the Gaucho's at the net brought the game and the match to an end as the Cougars took it 15-10.

Game three saw Doug Pickney, Bill Brown, Brent Berry, Dave Tally and Guy Kaniho come off the bench for the Cougars to finish up the match.

"Everyone played well tonight," Coach Peterson said. "The guys coming off the bench showed how strong they really are. We have a lot of depth here."

BYU, which sports a 3-0 record on their home court and is currently ranked as the No. 1 collegiate club in the nation, may have finished up their fall season with last night's game against UCSB.

"They're not as bad as the score indicated. We just played really well. We hung in there, pulled it all together and got some good digs when we needed them. We're a good team when we want to be," Coach Peterson said.

The Cougars hope to host The University of Manitoba, a Canadian team, in early December. As of yet nothing has been scheduled.

Editors predict Ute death

Jimmy the Greek should do so well.

Sports Editor Dawn Larsen picked eight out of 10 games last week, bringing her cumulative percentage to .702. Assistant Sports Editor Eric Goodell picked six right and has a .690 percent.

This week the guest predictor is Lynn Weller, editor of The Daily Universe. Weller is feeling lucky after the birth of his first child, Danny, earlier this week and thinks he will give the sports editors a run for their money.

Utah at BYU

There is no doubt among the predictors that the Cougars will pull off a big win. The Utes haven't beat the Cougars since 1978 and Larsen, Goodell and Weller don't see things changing this year.

Furthermore, the Cougars pulled off an impressive win over the Miners last week and they are playing very well. Larsen predicts the score to be 35-17.

Wyoming at UTEP

The Cowboys need to lose this game for BYU to still have a shot at a peice of the WAC title. Both Weller and Goodell are optomistic and predict a Miner win. However, Larsen disagrees and thinks the Cowboys will have a fairly easy victory.

Air Force at Hawaii

The predictors say Air Force will win this contest on the island. Hawaii has been too inconsistant and the Falcon's option will prove to be too much for the Rainbows.

New Mexico at San Diego St.

Again, Larsen, Goodell and Weller agree saying the Aztecs will win. New Mexico has had a dismal season and it doesn't look like it will improve at this point.

Colorado St. at Southwest Louisianna

Southwest Louisianna isn't a perennial powerhouse, but then again neither is CSU. The predictors pick the WAC team to win this contest.

(2) Oklahoma at (1) Nebraska

Larsen, Goodell and Weller go with the Cornhuskers. Oklahoma has had a lot of injuries says Goodell and they won't have what it takes to beat Nebraska on their home turf.

(5) UCLA at USC

Weller says the Trojans have shown promise lately and picks them to upset the Bruins. Larsen and Goodell disagree and go with the UCLA.

(7) Notre Dame at (15) Penn St.

Larsen, Goodell and Weller pick Notre Dame to win this contest. The Fighting Irish have looked tough this year and Penn St. was upset by the unranked Pitt team.

(8) Clemson at (14) S. Carolina

Goodell and Larsen go with the home team to win, however Weller says the Tigers will be victorious.

(16) Texas A&M at TCU

The predictors all say that the Horned Frogs will be defeated in this contest.

BYU vs. UTAH

tah has a longshot

AURY LIVSEY
Utah Chronicle Sports Editor

ll, going into the '84 election, r Mondale sported an outside e against the Ronald Reagan rnaut. And before this year's eason began, the CBS bigwigs figuring Tour of Duty could give osby Show a run for its money. the Edsel was supposed to come gh in the clutch and be a big y maker for Ford.

ich makes us zero for three.

l Utah beating BYU on the foot-eld?

we're zero for four.

t, the law of averages are against ., the law of averages are way st it. But hey, sooner or later the have got to beat the Cougars in ll.

ean, didn't UCLA finally lose in y Pavilion? Didn't the Republi-ose control of the House? And t the Skipper, Mr. Howell and an et. al. finally get rescued off t island?

t's about time Utah beat BYU gridiron.

l if the Utes can't win outright, e they can cover the 20-point l making it a moral victory. But that might even be a long shot.

at we do know is that all good s eventually have to come to an nd looking at it logically, as far s rivalry goes, this won't be the But hey, you gotta feel sorry for poor Utah players who always p playing for pride because their n was shot down the drain two s into the season.

Utah won't be going to a bowl this year. The BYU-Utah game on Saturday can be the Ute's bowl game.

A kind of All-American Bowl tune-up for the Cougars, and kind of a Cotton Swab Bowl for the U. Since BYU has had its trouble winning bowl games over the last couple of years, this could be the perfect chance for Utah.

Theoretically it would be a bowl game (albeit a quasi-bowl game for the Utes), so because of that, and because of BYU's history in postseason action, this game could be Utah's to win.

Hey, now stay with me. There's a lot more of this type of rationale. We've got Utah having to win because the law of averages are going to finally catch up with BYU. And BYU has to lose because this will be a bowl game of sorts for Utah — games the Cougs don't play particularly well in.

Ready for the next reason? Utah has played better on the road than at home in 1987. The Utes were only able to defeat New Mexico and Idaho State in the friendly confines of Rice Stadium. But on the road, Utah took care of Colorado State, Wisconsin and Boise State.

Now let's see. Where's this year's game being played?

Another reason? BYU will probably be looking past Utah to get a crack at Colorado State. You see, it was the Rams who were partly responsible for killing the Cougars' WAC title hopes last year when they won in Provo. BYU is licking its chops to play them again and LaVell and Company will probably take Utah for granted giving the Utes the advantage.

I know, that one's a bit on the shaky side but if you're still with me, there are other reasons. Utah generally wears the same color pants and jerseys for this game to kind of get psyched up. Last year, the Utes were decked out in all red. This year the U. could very possibly be dressed in all white. And if it snows, look out. It will be extremely difficult for BYU players to even see Utah players, let alone tackle them.

And I hear Bob Welti is a Ute fan.

Utah also has to win to throw the chase for the Beehive Boot into a quandry. BYU beat Utah State, Utah State beat Utah and Utah beats BYU.

So there you have it. Plenty of reasons why the Utes will break the eight-year losing streak. Plus I hear Mondale has a great shot at presidency in 88.

With the Edsel becoming the rage.

There is no rivalry

By DAWN LARSEN
Daily Universe Sports Editor

When people refer to the BYU-Utah rivalry, I laugh.

In the four years I have attended BYU I have yet to see a game between these two schools that would constitute a rivalry.

Look, if I could root for the the Utes I would.

I grew up in a house laden with anti-BYU propaganda. My father, a '64 U. of U. graduate, used to make me recite BYU coed jokes and sing "Utah Man" as a child. If the Utes had anything to root for, I'd pull for them. But, I'm not into chasing windmills. (For all the Utah football players who have gotton this far, this is a reference to Don Quixote).

It seems to me that the alledged rivalry between BYU and Utah really only exists in minds of the die-hard Ute fans. They shouldn't flatter themselves. In the past 14 outings, the Utes have walked away with only one win.

BYU tight end Darren Handley agrees that the rivalry is more on Utah's part than BYU's. "Their players take it much more seriously than we do — maybe that's what bothers them so much."

The best part about the whole Cougar-Ute rivalry is the week preceding the game. Every year BYU fans try to paint Salt Lake City blue, while Utah fans attempt to paint Provo red. But even this little rivalry seems to be dwindling. So far this week, BYU fans have struck twice: the normally white "U" on the east mountain overlooking the U. of U.'s campus had a blue day on Thursday and BYU fans indicated what they thought of the Utes on Rice Stadium's 50-yard line. The reddest thing in Provo this week has been stoplights — and they're not very popular either.

Unfortunately, the week's rivalry ends when the game begins. Although Dad will never admit it, I think even he is beginning to doubt he'll ever see a Ute victory over BYU in his lifetime.

Sometimes I'm not sure whether to respect Utah fans for their loyalty or to pity them for their stupidity. As a freshman I made the trip up to Salt Lake for the 'big' game. I painted a blue 'Y' on my face and I wore a BYU sweatshirt. As I walked into Rice stadium I was taunted, ridiculed, mocked and scorned.

Barely sober Ute fans kept yelling that they were going to beat us this year and that the Cougar team was lousy. Well lousy or not, BYU walked away with another win over the Utes that year and the National Championship.

The day Utah beats BYU is the day Jim and Tammy Bakker speak at General Conference ... the day Ollie North turns Communist ... the day Mikhail Gorbachev buys stock in Disneyland ... the day Minnie Mouse poses for Playboy ... In other words, its not going to happen!

Well, there's a little part of me that will be pulling for the underdogs on Saturday. Dad's birthday is that day and I'm secretly hoping for his sake that he'll have something to celebrate.

Knowing the Utes, he'll just have to settle for a card.

BYU-Ute matchup set

By ERIC GOODELL
Asst. Sports Editor

If there is one word to describe BYU-University of Utah football games, it probably is the word "emotional."

"It always is (emotional)," said BYU Head Coach LaVell Edwards.

With the emotion, fans can expect more excitement and hard-hitting than an average game.

"It's an exciting rivalry," said Cougar wide receiver David Miles.

BYU has beaten the University of Utah in football 14 of the last 15 contests, many of the games being blowouts.

Even though the rivalry has been awfully one-sided lately, BYU players still know the game between BYU and Utah Saturday at Cougar Stadium has a lot of meaning.

Miles said the big rivalry continues for several reasons. First, he said the Utes have many players on their team who originally wanted to play for BYU but weren't offered scholarships. Second, he said when he first came to BYU many of his coaches emphasized the importance of the game.

"They said it was one game we had to win," he said.

The Utes, who are 2-5 in the WAC and 5-6 overall this year, might be able to salvage their season with a win over the Cougars. The game will be the last of the year for the Utes, who will have played 12 straight Saturdays.

"Utah will probably be more fired up against us than any other opponent this season," Miles said.

Utah's passing game is ranked third in the nation. "They have an explosive offense," Edwards said.

Unfortunately for the Utes, they have the notoriety of having a porous defense.

This year they've given up an average of 450 yards per game.

Edwards said Utah is actually a better team than their record shows, and that injuries have plagued the Utes' performance.

Edwards said the 7-3 Cougars will be ready for the contest.

Putting the rivalry aside, if that's possible, BYU quarterback Sean Covey said he is not overly concerned with the upcoming game. "I'm preparing for this game like any other," he said.

Edwards said he and his coaching staff try not to mention the rivalry between the two schools.

"We talk more about the chance we have of having a good season," he said.

He also said he has stressed to his players the outside chance BYU has of winning the WAC if the Cougars win their remaining two games.

Covey said he's confident the Cougars will do well against Utah.

'Y' trackster to try grand slam

By FIONA McHARDY
Universe Sports Writer

The door has been opened for BYU's Angela Cook to become an all-American in three sports.

She will now be able to attend the National Cross Country Championships held in Charlottesville, Va., on Monday along with Noeleen Mullen.

"We're really excited for Angela," said BYU Coach Patrick Shane. "This is her chance to become an all-American in cross country."

Cook is an all-American in both indoor and outdoor track. She won the honor in indoor track twice. "This is her chance to make a grand slam," said Shane.

Cook originally believed she would not be able to attend nationals since she finished fourth in the combined NCAC/NCAA Region 7 meet last Saturday. The NCAA rules allow only the top three finishers in the region who are not on the winning team to attend nationals. Northern Arizona University was the winner of this meet, UTEP was second and BYU third..

UTEP was chosen to go to nationals also. This opened some spots in the national competition.

The entire BYU team might have been invited to attend the meet based on its win record, but was not. BYU has beaten three of the four teams that were chosen to compete at least once this year.

BYU was considered in the top 18 teams to go to nationals. According to the criteria set forth in the NCAA rule book, a team that beats another team should be given first priority to attend the final meet.

Had No. 2 runner Melanie Childs been healthy, Shane would have been even more upset over being overlooked. Childs injured herself during a basketball game and had to undergo knee surgery which has kept her out for the last part of the season.

"If Melanie were able to run, I would have been tempted to complain," said Shane.

This is the ultimate in 4-wheel alignment. Here, the rear-wheel camber and toe are adjusted, aligning the thrust line with the centerline. Then the front wheels are aligned with the thrust line. Since the thrust line and the centerline are the same the wheels are parallel, thanks to laser technology.
